

Friday, July 12, 2013

Letters

Sir, – How astonishing to read that former Anglo Irish Bank chief executive David Drumm criticises the “drip, drip, drip” release of phone recordings of conversations held by senior Anglo executives in 2008 and declares that he “will no longer allow [himself] to be made the scapegoat by politicians, politically connected former bankers and politically protected senior public servants who don’t want their role in the crisis to be highlighted”.

The drip, drip of the phone recordings of Mr Drumm’s conversations demonstrates that Ireland cannot afford any longer to be run by so many moralists who are ignorant of finance, and so many financiers who are ignorant of morals. – Yours, etc,

ROBERT F LYONS,

Kennebunkport,

Maine