

The Washington Post

Posted on-line: November 28, 2016

Robert Lyons, Kennebunkport, Maine

Trump's tweeting finger - new weapon of mass destruction

Fidel Castro's five-hour tirades have been replaced by the five rapid-fire tweets of the raging president-elect who now claims he would've got the popular vote also if millions of citizens had not voted illegally. [Donald Trump: 'I won the popular vote if you deduct the millions of people who voted illegally', Washington Post, Nov. 28, 2016]

The elected POTUS has become the STOTUS, (Supreme Tweeter of the United States). After the Electoral College records its votes, the leadership had better get the old Senate chamber ready for the impeachment trial on grounds of delusional dictatorship compounded by repetitive tweet syndrome causing dereliction of executive duties. Trump's tweeting finger is the new weapon of mass destruction in Western civilization.